"for sustained and exceptional contributions and services to cultural diplomacy in Africa." In early 2007, TC&F performed at the invitation of the Cambodian Government at the World Culture Expo in Angkor Wat. In May, 2008, the US State Dept. again presented an award to the group "for sustained excellence in promoting cultural diplomacy and mutual understanding through music in the East Asian and Pacific region."

The group is led by one of Chicago's most distinguished violinists, Elliott Golub, who served as concertmaster of Chicago's Music of the Baroque since its inception in 1972 to 2006. Mr. Golub was formerly concertmaster of the Contemporary Chamber Players of the University of Chicago. In Washington, D.C., he was invited to play at the Kennedy Center, Library of Congress, and the White House. In 2006, he received the William Hall Sherwood Award "for outstanding contributions to the arts," and in 2010 received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Cleveland Institute of Music "for excellence in promoting cultural diplomacy as an ambassador of music to the world."

Dr. Joseph M. Daisy
President
College of Micronesia-FSM
P. O. Box 159
Kolonia, Pohnpei FM 96941

Dear President Daisy,

The University of Guam is proposing to the National Science Foundation designation and funding as an EPSCOR (Experimental Program to Stimulate Cooperative Research) institution. We were awarded a Planning Grant 1 October, 2012, to fund the process of developing the proposal for the full EPSCoR program. The anticipated deadline for submittal is August, 2013.

A STEM pipeline in Micronesia and specifically for Guam is at the core of our proposal to build science and technology capacity at the University and in the region. We proposed forming a PACSTEM committee to oversee our planning and our efforts toward that end. We invite you to join that committee and participate in the process.

In order to take full advantage of the considerable experience and knowledge available for the region, we are proposing a meeting on Guam May 15-16, 2013. You are invited to that meeting to engage in dialogue over our proposal to the National Science Foundation and to contribute to a discussion on the future of STEM and science and technology in the region.

There are several components to our proposal that are now taking shape:

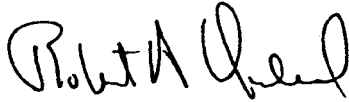

1. Research themes have been developed that incorporate input from faculty who were requested to submit research concepts resonant with the themes that we developed (Attachment 1).
2. A cyber infrastructure plan has been developed that draws on the expertise of David Lassner, University of Hawaii, and that will be a critical component of our proposal to build capacity on Guam and in the region (Attachment 2).
3. A STEM plan is under development and the current draft documents are Attachment 3.

4. A plan for Graduate Studies is underway that will contribute to strengthening University of Guam capacity as well as enhancing opportunities for our students from the region.

We ask that you review these documents and come to Guam for discussion. Shortly before the meeting we anticipate sending you a draft proposal for the EPSCoR to help shape the dialogue. We are seeking critiques that will contribute to a sharper and more resilient plan for the EPSCoR competition in August.

Thank you for your consideration of this invitation. Please RSVP at your very earliest convenience. If you cannot attend, we will set up VTC, Teleconferencing, and Skype access so that we can avail as many as possible who are unable to come to Guam. For those who can attend, please contact Mr. Edwin Reyes at 671-735-2173 or via email at edwinreyes@ugam.uog.edu.

5. Strategies on Analyzing Problems (Building D Room #_201)

We will present the teaching strategies on how students can analyze problems. Problem analysis helps create awareness of problems and, through awareness, motivation to find solutions. Through problem analysis, young adults can succeed in overcoming obstacles or challenges they face in their lives. Knowing how to analyze problems is a necessary skill for students if they are to understand and improve their surroundings. This lesson is designed to help students analyze problems when they read, write, speak, and listen. People must solve problems every day, so analyzing problems is important both inside and outside of the classroom. In the language arts classroom, analyzing problems helps students use reading strategies, understand content, and communicate possible solutions to the problems in a text. Outside of the classroom, analyzing problems helps students look for the true source of the issue and find effective solutions. Analyzing problems is essential to reach effective solutions.

Dear President Daisy,

On behalf of the University of Hawai'i at Hilo, I am pleased to send congratulations to the College of Micronesia-FSM on celebrating its 20th Anniversary. The sister relationship between our two universities is one I value highly, and I am honored to offer congratulations to you and your community on this occasion.

It's wonderful to see the commitment of the College of Micronesia-FSM to assist the citizens of the Federated States of Micronesia to be well-educated, prosperous, globally-connected, accountable, healthy and able to live in harmony with the environment and the world community. Our campuses have a lot in common and can learn much from each other. UH Hilo is also a diverse yet globally connected university community, committed to helping create the future of the Pacific region by challenging students to reach their highest level of achievement. Both campuses give students opportunities to apply their learning to a distinctive natural and cultural environment. Both campuses are preparing students for a world of growing global interdependence.

This commitment to the stability and progress of our respective islands while encouraging a global perspective in our communities—and especially in our students—is destined to increase. I look forward to working with you on our shared vision for a prosperous and successful future for the Pacific region and I will do all I can in my position as chancellor of UH Hilo to strengthen our sister relationship for the mutual enrichment of both universities. I look forward to working with you on these goals.

Again, I send congratulations to you and the good people of the College of Micronesia-FSM and wish you all great success. On behalf of UH Hilo, I send you

Aloha!

Sincerely,
