Family Education Rights and Privacy Act

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) was enacted in 1974 by the US Congress to ensure student's right to inspect their own records and have some control over the disclosure of their personal records.

FERPA states that personally identifiable information under the control of an educational institution can only be provided to that student or, in certain cases, the parents or legal guardians without prior notice. Once the student teaches the age of 18 or enters a postsecondary institution, a school is prohibited from disclosing to the parents without the student's consent. However, if the parent can demonstrate that the student is a financial dependent (via Internal Revenue Service), the institution may opt to disclose the information.

Credit Load

Students are limited to a maximum load of 18 credits per regular semester, and six credits per summer session.

Additional courses can only be taken with permission by the Vice President for Instructional Affairs.

Full-Time versus Part-Time Students

Full-time students are those who register for 12 or more credits in a regular semester or six credits in a summer session. On the other hand, part-time students are those who register less than 12 credits in a regular semester or less than six credits in a summer session.
